ABOUT THE NOVEL

The Book of Revelations follows Nan Jaffe from her childhood in Indianapolis into adulthood after a traumatic event in 1965 alters the course of her life.

Sent to live with her grandparents and given a new identity, she grows up carrying the unresolved effects of early psychological trauma, moving through adolescence and adulthood under shifting names and fragmented lives.

Across decades and perspectives, the novel explores memory, identity, and the fragile structures that hold a life together when continuity is disrupted.
